There is no „Best“ CMS. Seriously? Seriously.

When just running a website is not enough anymore and why TYPO3 might be the best CMS for you.

Do you remember the times when you thought your websites were the one and only most valuable content source for all your customers?

Nowadays we see a wide range of different channels where enterprise users want to create and publish almost any kind of content. Or maybe you need to be able to have a workflow exactly in the opposite direction. Like getting your data and assets such as images or documents, out of your ERP or eCommerce System and join them together in a nicely rendered PDF on your corporate website.

Beginning with traditional websites, over to apps – no matter if they are native or web-based responsive ones – to a broad range of social media channels, direct marketing with mails and even print support – TYPO3 supports all of these either out-of-the box or with free extensions.

Did we miss something? No problem! Since TYPO3 is a fully community driven open source project you can either implement new channels or content types on your own, with the help of professional agencies, developers and integrators or even request them to have them integrated into the TYPO3 core.
